

To whom it may concern,

I am writing on behalf of Jake White, whom I am supporting with my highest recommendations for the position of commissioner. I have known Mr. White for over 20 years and I can attest to his character from both a professional and personal level. As a physician who deals with many people from all segments of society, I can truly say that Mr. White demonstrates the highest levels in his work ethics and moral values.

Mr. White and I first developed a strong bond in high school. He was an exemplary honors student who was dedicated and disciplined enough to handle the workload of both rigorous academics and after school employment. His sense of responsibility and dependability was a shining characteristic even at his young age. This led him to acceptance at UCLA followed by initial postgraduate work experience ranging from business sales with the Los Angeles Dodgers to individual investment planning. He has demonstrated a unique ability to work successfully in both a corporate environment and a personalized one-on-one setting. He brings not only a sense of professionalism to his work, but a clear passion for performing his work with the highest ethical standards.

Currently, he has dedicated his career to teaching. His transition to teaching comes from his lifelong commitment to community service as well as his desire to work with kids and young adults. His teaching credentials have always been recognized highly by both parents and his peers. In addition, he is a tremendous leader at his church and actively participates in many outreach programs. Through his teaching and church involvement, Mr. White has been involved in working with his entire community at every socioeconomic level. Mr. White demonstrates leadership and volunteerism to a level which inspires many of his students and colleagues.

Finally, the most important aspect to Mr. White is his role as a father and husband. Having kids around the same age as Mr. White, he is a constant source to me for advice and guidance. Mr. White is always supportive, yet honest in his assessment of any predicament I present to him. His dedication in raising his kids with a sense of responsibility and honesty is a trait which translates to his relationship with students, coworkers, and friends.

In summary, I would like to endorse Jake White with my highest recommendations for commissioner. Not only does he possess the skill set needed for planning, financing, and management which is demonstrated in his work experience, but he is one of a select few people I have encountered who would work well in any group setting. Furthermore, his high ethical standards and impartiality which is strongly supported by his teaching experience is an asset that is obviously a prerequisite for being commissioner. Equally important, Mr. White carries an overwhelming commitment and motivation to serving his community and state. Mr. White would make an excellent choice for commissioner.

Sincerely,

Brian Kim, M.D.
